Declare what you want

Week 3 | Transform

Part VII – Declare what you want

Today is the day! Today is the day you are going to declare to the universe what it is you really want.

First – I want you to get really clear on what you are asking for.

For those of you who are familiar with Danielle LaPorte, it is kind of like desire mapping for money. I want you to find a few words that describe how you want to feel about money.

Rather than thinking about the end goal like “be a millionaire” think about the way you want to feel every single day when you interact with money. It could be things like “calm” or “abundant” or “empowered”. If you need some inspiration, go back and read through your notes from the What’s Your Dream lesson or pull out a thesaurus.

Once you come up with these words, give yourself permission to be empowered by these words. How you interact with money is a choice.

The second task is to think of money as a person and write a letter to money to declare what you want. Don't over think this one too much – just let it flow. What comes up might surprise you.
